Alexander Oettl has just finished his first year of the Ph.D. program at the Rotman School of Management at the University of Toronto. His fields of interest include innovation, the management of technology, knowledge diffusion, and economic geography. Alexander earned his undergraduate bachelor degree in commerce, and his master of science in managerial economics, both from Queen’s University in Kingston, Canada. His current research explores the rate to which scientific labor migration influences knowledge diffusion, both within and across firm and regional boundaries.